RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 96 pages. Original publisher: Washington, DC: Office of the Science Advisor, Risk Assessment Forum, U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, 2008 OCLC Number: (OCOlc)233835521 Subject: Environmental risk assessment -- Mathematical models. Excerpt: . . . 1. INTRODUCTION Polychlorinated dibenzo-p-dioxins (PCDDs), dibenzofurans (PCDFs), and biphenyls (PCBs) (Figure 1) are persistent bioaccumulative contaminants that are found ubiquitously in environmental matrices, including tissues of fish, birds, and mammals. The most well-studied chemical in this group is 2, 3, 7, 8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin (2, 3, 7, 8-TCDD). Demonstrated toxic effects of 2, 3, 7, 8-TCDD in fish, birds, and mammals include adverse effects on reproduction, development, and endocrine functions; wasting syndrome; immunotoxicity; and mortality. Several PCDDs, PCDFs, and PCBs have been shown to cause toxic responses similar to 2, 3, 7, 8-TCDD, in both laboratory and field situations. In this document, the term dioxin-like effects is used to refer to those effects that are similar to those caused by 2, 3, 7, 8-TCDD, and the term dioxin-like chemicals is used to refer to chemicals that exert such effects through binding to the aryl hydrocarbon receptor (AHR). For further information regarding dioxin-like effects observed specifically in wildlife species, refer to U. S. EPA (1993, 2001b) and references therein. It should be noted that a number of chemicals other than PCDDs, PCDFs, and certain PCBs may also exert dioxin-like effects through binding to the AHR (see Section 2. 1). Although these chemicals are not specifically addressed in this framework, if they meet the criteria discussed in Section 2 they may be included in assessments that apply the toxicity equivalence methodology. Presently, evidence is sufficient to conclude that a common mechanism of...
