Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

In the present paper, we extend this work by examining 55 process innovations used in the manufacture of semiconductors and electronic subassemblies. In 67 of the process innovations studied in this field which involved novel process machinery, we find that it is the process machinery user rather than the manufacturer who dominates the innovation process by: recognizing the need; inventing a solution; building a prototype; and using the prototype in commercial production prior to any involvement of a manufacturer of process machinery in the innovation work. The presence of a mix of user-dominated and manufacturer dominated innovation cases in our sample manufacturer dominated innovation embraces those innovation cases in which the maximum user contribution was recognition of need) allowed us to test various parameters which we hoped would discriminate between these two innovation patterns. Our success at this effort was unfortunately low- the only strong pattern found was that users always dominated the innovation process leading to first commercial practice of a given manufacturing process step, while both patterns are found in the case of improvement innovations. In a final section, the data and findings of three studies of process innovation in industries other than those studied by us are examined for indications of the innovative role played by the process user. The role of the user in each appears large, thus implying that the findings of our study may apply to process...
