If Looks Could Kill (Hardback)

By Jeanne Lazo

Stargazer Pub Co, 2005. Hardback. Book Condition: New. 213 x 142 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. In the Village of Dorseyville, Pennsylvania, a town too remote for streetlights or sidewalks, fourteen-year-old Priggs (short for Priscilla Griggs), her best friend Fawn, and their closest neighbors, Art and Tucker, make a bone-chilling discovery in the cemetery on Halloween night: a pair of white legs dangling out of the hollow Death Tree, feet fitted with red high-heeled shoes, toes pointing up to the dark heavens. It looks like a prank, but it isn't. The woman is real and dead. A week later, the red shoes show up in a painting at the local art gallery. The kids jump to the conclusion that the brilliant but creepy artist, Eduardo Sanguine, is the murderer. Fierce competitors Priggs and Art set out to prove it, dragging Fawn and Tucker with them. Things aren't always as they seem in this sleepy village—not the cast of strange characters, the clues in the paintings, or even the kids. An If Looks Could Kill Teacher's Guide is available for grades 6-8 (ISBN: 1-933277-05-X, 32 pages, $12.95) with activities in vocabulary, reading comprehensions, narrative writing, the...

Good electronic book and valuable one. It really is basic but unexpected situations in the 50 percent in the pdf. You won't really feel monotony at any moment of your time (that's what catalogues are for concerning when you ask me).
