Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: .and of hours of labor, 1907 to 1920, by occupations, is presented in Table 1 which follows: INIM pation, ear offiSSS ZJfcch. ml Slilfi s wh k we Data were not obtained for Other employees before 1914. It will be noted that the number of Other employees in 1920 is less than half the number as shown in either 1914, 1916, or 1918. This is due principally to the fact that the 1914, 1916, and 1918 data for Other employees included 39 occupations for which 1920 figures are shown. In 1920 data are presented for both males and females in 3 occupations for which figures were shown for males only in 1914, 1916, and 1918. Females in these 3 occupations were included with Other employees prior to 1920. In 1920 data are presented for both males and females in 3 occupations for which figures were shown for females only in 1914, 1916, and 1918. Males in these 3 occupations were included with Other employees prior to 1920. Table 2 is a summary which shows for each occupation the number of establishments having weekly pay-roll periods, the number of employees, average full-time hours per week, average hours actually worked in one week, per cent that average hours actually worked in one week is of average full-time hours per week, average earnings per hour, average full-time earnings per week, and average earnings actually received in one week in 1920. It is in fact a summary of the occupational...
